265013	Spring 2015	PSYC-3565	Advertising Bodies	Advertising is the most common form of propaganda today. However, men and women are not portrayed the same in advertising. Women are often portrayed in either very sexual or very submissive manners, while men are portrayed in positions of wealth or power. This project will seek to research and contrast common themes between women and men as portrayed in advertisements, culminating in an essay and a photo series.
265011	Spring 2015	PSYC-3185	Child Development Myth Busters: an in depth look into modern child rearing myths.	A general requirement for the class is to pick a child rearing myth (e.g. "spare the rod, spoil the child") and find research to affirm or disprove it. This is a group project, and the group will have to present their findings to the class. For my contract, Dr. Riser and I have decided that it would be interesting to expand on the project. I will pick 3-5 other myths, and critically analyze them using research found throughout the semester.
